PEACE.
An Important Letter from Henry Ward Beecher.

The Political Situation as Viewed from the Pulpit of Plymouth Church.

The duty of the hour as pointed out by the Great Radical.

PEACE.
Plymouth, Thursday, Aug. 28.
GENTLEMEN: I am obliged to you for the invitation which you have made to me to act as Chaplain of the Convention of Soldiers and Sailors about to convene at Cleveland. I cannot attend it, but I heartily wish that the whole nation, even Territory, were so united, and that the object of the restoration of the Union, which is the object of all the States lately in rebellion to their Federal relations.

Our theory of government has no place for a State except in the Union. It is justly taken for granted that the duties and responsibilities of a State in Federal relations tend to its political health, and to that of the whole nation. Even Territory, are brought in, often before the prescribed conditions are fulfilled, as if it were dangerous to leave the community outside of the great body of the people.

Had the loyal soldiers and Representatives of Tennessee been admitted at once, on the assembling of Congress, and in moderate succession, Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, and Virginia, the public mind of the South would have been far more healthy than it is, and those States which have been under probation to the last would have been under more salutary influences to good conduct than it does arms watched over by.

Refusing to admit loyal Soldiers and Representatives from the South to Congress will not help the Government. It will not cure for the South. It will not protect them. It will not secure any amendment of our Constitution, however just and wise. It will only increase the dangers and complicate the duties of the Government, and the whole nation, or any section of it, or class of it, the first demand of our time is entire reunion.

Once united, we can, by a school, churches, a free press and increasing free speech, attack each evil and secure every good. Every moment that we delay this healthful step complicates the case. The exclusion of loyal soldiers and Representatives grows more irritable; the army becomes indispensable to local government, and the Government at Washington is called to interfere in one and another of the most delicate and dangerous duties of the Government.

The Federal Government is left to the mercy of the rebel States, and will inevitably founder when it attempts to keep a half a score of States under Federal authority, but without national responsibility. To the contrary, the Union by Federal civil officers and by army, as a policy not only unbecomingly our ideas and principles, but also our dangerous and dangerous duties.

How can we, in fact, a course of instruction, preparing our Government to be a peace and facilitating the people's stretch of authority which can never be other than dangerous to liberty.

I am aware that good men are withheld from advocating the prompt and successive admission of the rebel States by the press, of its effect upon parties and upon freedom.

It is said that if admitted to Congress the Southern Senators and Representatives will come to the country, in this nation they will be dismembered to serve the ends of peace. Have we learned no wisdom by the history of the past ten years? In this country, the great class of the nation is a goodly number of parties plunged in into rebellion and war?

Even when the power should pass into the hands of a party made to account for the war and the interests of the nation, the power would be used as they pleased. The war has changed, not alone in its nature, but in its character. It is no longer a mere rebellion, it is a civil war, it is a war of the people against the people.

We have entered a new era of liberty. The style of thought is free and free. The young men of our times are regenerated. The great army has been a school, and hundreds of thousands of men are now home to preach a true and noble view of human rights. All the industries of society are moving with increased vigor towards intelligence and liberty. Everywhere—in churches, in literature, in nature and natural sciences, in physical industries, in social questions, as well as in politics, the nation feels that the winter is over, and a new spring has begun in the horizon, and works through all the elements. In this happy changed and advanced condition of things, no party of the retrograde can maintain itself. Everlasting marches, and parties must march.

I fear with wonder and shame and scorn the fear of a few that the South once more in adjustment with the Federal Government will rule this nation! The South is rich—ever so rich; the South is poor—never before so poor. The population of the North is nearly double that of the South. The industry of the North, in diversity, in forwardness in productiveness, in all the machinery and estimates of the manufacturing industry, is a century in advance of the South. Churches in the North crown every hill, and schools swarm in every neighborhood; while the South has but scattered Southern schools. The South is a vast, untamed wilderness, the edge of a continent of darkness. In the presence of such a contrast, how mean and craven is the fear that it will rule the policy of the land! For it will rule the policy of the land, in time, most important influence on the nation, we are glad to believe. But it rises at once to the control of the Government, it becomes the North, it is a vast, untamed wilderness, the edge of a continent of darkness. In the presence of such a contrast, how mean and craven is the fear that it will rule the policy of the land! For it will rule the policy of the land, in time, most important influence on the nation, we are glad to believe.
